Award winning Davis Graveyard Unveils Halloween Plans

MILWAUKIE, Ore. — Some couples like to spend time together by playing golf, or attending lectures and concerts. But Jeff and Chris Davis like to celebrate Halloween together — all year round. Once again, the Davis home has been transformed into a ghost and goblin playground — this year, their modest 1930's-era home located at the corner of Johnson Creek Boulevard and 43rd sports a Haunted Graveyard theme.

The 2007 yard display features a church and grave keeper's house, complete with a talking head that spouts a creepy history of the graveyard and its occupants along with several eerie ghost effects. Visit the Davis Graveyard blog for current photos of the 2007 design. New to the display is a turn of the century replica hearse, more tombstones, and a new video feature. This year donations will be taken for the Milwaukie High School Dance Team, which will be performing several nights.

Nearly every prop is hand-made by the couple. Jeff Davis has made Halloween his passion for nine years and has been hired by other homeowners to design and create their own creepy yard scenery. Doing business under the name Davis Graveyard, Davis is writing a book to help others learn how to make props and transform their own yards into elaborately Halloween themed sets. He also presented a standing-room only seminar at the HauntCon convention in Detroit. The Davis' Haunted Graveyard will be seen in October as one of "America's Scariest Houses" on FearNet.com, and they won 2nd Place Yard Haunt at Haunt X inter-national haunt awards.

NOTE: Local media are invited to visit the house as a possible news location for Halloween 'eve or Halloween night coverage. Call Jeff Davis at 503-998-2239 for more information.
